The Union Depot

Early Monday morning work on the new union depot was resumed, all contentions of the parties to the injunction proceedings which have halted the work for several weeks past having been adjusted in a manner mutually satisfactory.

Our citizens are pleased that this much needed improvement is now assured and that the chance of loss is reduced to absolutely nothing. They are pleased too that the residents of the city who felt themselves agrieved over council's action have reached an amicable adjustment of those grievances.

A settlement of the controversy between the parties interested, not only puts at an immediate end the delay producing contention, which for a time seriously menaced the whole project, but it restores the good feeling of those who objected to the manner of the proceeding in a way that would have been impossible by court decree at the conclusion of a long drawn out and bitterly contested law suit.

Everybody in Washington wanted the depot project to go nesday fair. forward and now that all objections to the method of proceed ure has been disposed of satisfactorily there exists a real cause for congratulation.

The new depot will fill a long needed want and will go a long way toward placing the city in a proper light with the traveling public. It will be a great factor in keeping Washington on the map, where the city belongs.

The President and Mr. Bryan

The emphatic announcement by Mr. Bryan last week of his opposition to the program for national preparedness which President Wilson and his advisors have agreed upon for pre sentation to the next Congress, did not come as a surprise to those who have followed the trend of events.

The radical stand which the former secretary of state adheres to, regarding expenditures of the public revenues for an increase of the army and navy, have long been known. Mr. Bryan's peace policies are so pronounced as to admit of no compromise. President Wilson is also an ardent advocate of peace but, officially at least, whether from sense of official duty or personal inclination, he has declined to go to the ex treme which Mr. Bryan has assumed and is now maintaining

The second note to Germany following the Lusitania dis aster furnished the excuse for Mr. Bryan's retirement from the cabinet. There were few, however, who believed that the sending of that note was the real cause underlying the separation of the president and the secretary of state. Most people believed that the cause of the difference was more fundamental and far reaching in its effect.

Since the announcement by President Wilson of the national preparedness program and the intent to submit that program to congress as an administration measure calling for the expenditure of nearly a billion dollars, Mr. Bryan's open declaration of opposition has been hourly expected. On Fri day of last week that declaration came and a division in the president's own party seems certain to follow the presentation of the proposal to congress.

As predicted long ago the coming session of congress will early disclose the power of the two men now opposing each other.

Mr. Bryan has heretofore been clothed with the authority of leadership. This time he, as a private citizen, will meet as an opponent in the halls of congress, one of his own political party, the president of the United States, with an immense patronage at his command.

Mr. Bryan has once again "contraried" the leaders of his own party and in doing so has invited a contest with the most formidable opponent he has ever encountered since he attained national prominence and in doing so has made the re election of President Wilson extremely doubtful.

Political revolt in the Democratic party similar to the Roosevelt uprising in nineteen twelve in the Republican party is not impossible as a result of the present determination of President Wilson and the equally determined opposition of the former secretary of state.

The present difference between the president and Mr. Bryan are not new. They are the same differences which have all along existed and the opposition of the former secretary of state to the president's plan of national preparedness serves only to emphasize those differences. It is the clash between the man who is guided by precedent and the man who would break away from precedent and carve a new way for humanity through the wilderness of problems. It is a difference of belief and therefore extremely doubtful of adjustment.

Poetry For Today

THE HOMELAND. My land was the west land; my home was on the hill, I never think of my land but makes my heart to thrill; never smell the west wind that dreams are in my eyes.

My home crowned the high land; it had a stately grace.

I never think of my land but I see my mother's face;

never smell the west wind that blows the silver ships

But old delight is in my heart and mirth is on my lips.

My land was a high land; my home was near the skies, I never think of my land but a light is in my eyes, never smell the west wind that blows the summer rain -But I am at my mother's knee, little lad again.

WEATHER AND THE SCHOOL:

Cold, Calm and Clear Days Show the Pupils at Their Best. Teaching children is not the easiest thing in the world. It presents a problem complicated by many and diverse factors. Some of these are only now beginning to be properly appreciated One such is the influence of weather ronditions

Investigation has shown that the state of the weather has a marked effect both on the children's conduct and on their mental and physical pow-

This was first clearly brought out a few years ago by an American psy chologist, Professor E. G. Dexter whose researches still are among the most exhaustive and informing that have been made in this novel field o

Professor Dexter, studying condi tions in the schools of cities at selevel, like New York, Boston and Phil adelphia, and of others at high alti tudes, found that in the former the pu pils were best behaved on cold, calm and clear days. Muggy days were pro ductive of the greatest unruliness. marked tendency to misbehavior was also noted on hot days and on windy

In high altitude schools, such as those of the city of Denver, where mugginess is seldom in evidence. windy days were found to have the most disastrous effect on conduct. Cold, calm and clear days were again the days of best behavior.

With respect to working ability the same results were observed. Both mental and physical tasks were best performed on cold calm and clear days. - H. Addington Bruce in New York Globe.

MACE OF THE SPEAKER.

Ancient Emblem Used In the House of Representatives.

In one respect the house of repre sentatives surpasses the senate in dig nity. The senate has no mace. Now a mace is not much in the way of furniture. It is a silver eagle mounted upon a staff around which are bands of silver. This mace is always an emblem of the house of representatives. It is the duty of one employee to look after it Just before a session of the house be gins he takes it from the office of the sergeant at arms into the house cham ber, and as soon as the speaker's gavel falls he inserts it in a socket in a stone pillar at the right of the speaker's chair. The mace remains there while the house is in session and is taken out and stood beside its pedestal when the house is in committee of the whole. When the house adjourns the mace is carried back to the office of the sergeant at arms.

This ancient emblem has not a thing to do with the order of business of the house save as one of the old time regulations that are continued. When the house is turbulent an officer seizes the mace and walks through the aisles. Only once or twice when the speaker ington correspondent, have I seen an officer seize the mace and walk through the house, waving it backward and for ward. Possibly the sight of it brought members to their senses and they retired to their seats. At all events, that is about the only real use for the mace that I ever have observed

What a Toad Enjoys.

There are few things more amusing than to watch a toad submitting to the operations of a back scratching. He will at first look somewhat suspicious. ly at the twig which you are advance ing toward him, but after two or three passes down his back his manner un dergoes a marked change, his eyes close with an expression of infinite rapture, he plants his feet wider apart. and his body swells out to nearly donble its ordinary size, as if to obtain by these means more room for enjoyment. Thus he will remain until you make some sudden movement which startles him or until he has had as much petting as he wants, when, with a puff of regretful delight, he will reduce him self to his usual dimensions and hopaway, bent once more on the pleasure. of the chase.

Fish In Former Times.

Men of former ages, unless they lived near the sea or a river, had great diffi culties in gratifying their taste for fish The great houses had their fish ponds or stews, but sea fish, such as cod bream, sturgeon, herring and sprats, were salted, and the excessive consumption of highly salted fish in the middle ages is said to have produced leprosy. Fish was also baked in ples to enable it to be carried for great dis-

Columbus, Nov. 9. - That Former Senator Theodore E. Kitchin Says He Can Not Support Defense Plan.

CALLS ATTHEWHITE HOUSE

Holds Conference With the President and Later States He Will Oppose Preparedness Program In a Personal Capacity-Majority Leader to Outline Position When Congress Meets In December.

Washington, Nov. 9 .- After a long conference at the White House, Claude Litchin, Democratic leader of the house, told President Wilson that he could not support the administration's program for national defense.

Mr. Kitchin informed the president, however, that he would oppose the program in a personal capacity only and not as majority leader.

Mr. Kitchin was with the president more than an hour, during which Mr. Wilson outlined to him the army and navy plans for the next session of congress and for the next five years, and sought to influence the majority leader to be in harmony with him. Mr. Kitchin gave his views frankly to the president, directing his opposition chiefly to the naval program. "All I can say," said Representative

Kitchin as he left the White House, is that I very much regret that I can not support the president's national defense program. The plans do not meet with my convictions, particularly with reference to the navy." Mr. Kitchin was asked his grounds for opposition to the naval program. the navy became useless and the army

"I shall make a clear exposition of my views as soon as congress convenes in a speech in the house," he replied. "Of course I shall not attempt to oppose the program as the majority leader, but merely in my personal capacity."

ing the president, Mr. Kitchin said he approached the national defense subject with an open mind, and was will ing to be convinced of the wisdom of the administration's program if the president could give him what he would consider a satisfactory justification for the proposed large increases in army and navy appropriations. Later, he said the president had said rothing which had caused him to change his mind. Representative Kitchin's definite announcement of his position will make it impossible for him to lead the fight for the administration's program in the house. The burden of the leadership will devolve probably upon Chairman Hay of the military committee, Chairman Padgett of the raval committee, Chairman Sherley of the fortifications committee and Chairman Fitzgerald of the appropriations committee.

Winston Churchill's attempt to hearten and arouse the British people by pointing to their invincible navy was natural under the circumstances. The new Balkan situation, coming on the heels of a repulse in France, made the case of England look dark. But with the navy intact, Mr. Churchill argued, the nation might be sure of recovery and final triumph. For the hour which called it forth the argument must have been effective, but the world at large can but take note that England has long banked too heavily on her navy. An enemy bent upon aggression would know wherein lay England's strength and, being unable to match it in kind. would avoid that point and strike elsewhere. What England needed most in 1914 was an army, an establishment, as the world is now told, of millions of men. The government with difficulty secured means to build up the navy. but would have failed to build up an army to equal it. The great armies of Europe are due to conscription, which the Briton hates. In the extreme crisis failed to materialize. The lesson seems to be that national defense must be all round preparation, not alone material, but personnel. The latter should be efficient morally and mentally as well as technically, with a national impulse Mr. Kitchin said he thought it very which shrinks at no hardship and no

The attitude of the British foreign office on the issue of the "freedom of the seas," as announced recently, is that "the whole question of international agreements and how they can be made worth anything in the future may reasonably form the subject of discussion between nations after the war." Much has been said about violations of international law and of national rights as defined by that law by belligerents, but nothing could be more frank than this declaration by a government which our state department has remonstrated with upon this very point. Our meat packers, farmers and cotton planters have found their rights upon the seas interfered with right along. To help them in their dilemma the issue cannot be decided too soon one way or the other.

Loot Market House and Raid German Consulate.

OUTBREAK IN CHIHUAHUA

Forced Loan on Wealthy Citizens to Have Been Looted by Carranza principal speaker. Soldiers.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 9.-According to Americans who have just arrived here from Chihuahua, a mob composed of unpaid Villa soldiers, civilians and women, raided the German consulate in Chihuahua, burned the market house and looted the headquarters of the confiscation agency.

Following the rioting, the Villa mismanagement. commander in Chihuahua levied a forced loan of $100,000 Mexican gold on the merchants and wealthy residents in order to obtain money with which to pay the rioting troops.

The rioting started when the soldiers made demand for their pay on the officers of the Chihuahua garrison. Having no money, the commander attempted to put them off by promising money later. The soldiers, joined by a mob of men and women, then went to the market house, set fire to it after taking out quantities of food, and proceeded to the German consulate, where silver and lead bullion belonging to the Chihuahua Mining company is said to have been seized. The confiscation agency was then visited, but nothing of value was found there. The forced loan raised and the mob dispersed

HIS DAY OF REST.

A Town In France Where a Legal Holiday Is Strictly Observed.

The jeweler's face expressed bewilderment and astonishment and amusement. He looked from the artist to me and back again at the artist. He started at the end of every sentence to say something, but the artist didn't give him a chance. The artist kept on sufficient money to pay off the troops | talking, while I kept on trying to control my sense of humor. I wanted to shriek. The artist and I were leaving by the 3:15 train for Pont Croix, and we didn't intend to come back this way. It was Thursday, but the jeweler had politely explained that he could not give us the watch until tomorrow, although it was all ready and was hanging from its little book in the shop at whose open door we stood. The reason was that Thursday had been chosen by the jeweler for his repos hebdomadaire-the one day in seven rest imposed by law.-Herbert Adams Gibson in Harper's Magazine.

Light of a Deep Sea Shrimp.

One of the most extraordinary crustacea ever discovered was dredged up by the Prince of Monaco from a depth of 16,000 feet. It has been named Oplophorus grimaldi. It is a sort of shrimp, and its peculiarity is that it squirts from two holes near its mouth a liquid which, on coming into contact with salt water, produces a fine pale blue light.

Absolute darkness reigns in the depths where it lives, but the little shrimp does not find it necessary to keep its light always burning. This would use up too much energy, so it squirts out the illuminating fluid only when it wants to look at something, or perhaps to attract the minute animalculae that form its food.-New York

A Poverty Stricken Queen.

Partly owing to the fact that she was wedded to an avaricious king and partly because she was generous with the little money allowed her Elizabeth of York, queen of Henry VIL, spent but a small amount for dress. She was very often in debt, and the sums she spent were ridiculously small, 20 shillings ($5) being the greatest amount expended at any one time. Her gowns ing for war we should expunge from were mended and turned, and new waists were made for them, as is shown by the record of bills paid to her tailor. These bills prove that she wore her clothes for a long time, for her gowns were obliged to be newly hemmed, and also that, though a princess of the great house of Plantagenet, she wore shoes costing but 24 cents. which were decorated with tin buckles.

JANUARY, APRIL. JULY and OCTOBER 1st Capitalization

Preferred Stock, authorized and issued, $400,000 Common Stock authorized $600,000; issued $500,000

HE DOW DRUG COMPANY, an Ohio corporation, has purchased for cash the chain of retail drug stores and one wholesale drugstore formerly owned and operated by M. Cora Dow, and the several drug stores formerly owned and operated by The Weatherhead Drug Company, all in the City

THE PREFERRED STOCK is a first and prior lien against all assets, as well as net earnings, and the payment of dividends is cumulative. There is no indebtedness, nor can any mortgage debt or bond issue be created without consent of the owners of 75 % of the authorized and outstanding issue of preferred stock.

The corporation starts business with ample cash in its treasury for working capital, and with which to open additional stores.

The COMMON STOCK has accruing to it all net profits, after deductions for depreciation and maintenance of the physical properties, and the payment of dividends on preferred stock.

OFFICERS D. C. KELLER, President, formerly Secretary and AND Treasurer of the Weatherhead Drug Company

HERMAN JERGENS, Capitalist, formerly of the Jergens Soap Company. W. A. JULIAN, President of the Julian & Kokenge Company, Shoe Manufacturers.

The Underwriters, who have purchased the two concerns and provided the necessary cash working capital, have, as a result of the division of the capital stock, a considerable cash investment in the common stock, practically all of which they own.

The equity existing in the actual cash investment provides a wide margin of safety, over and above the total authorized issue of preferred stock, and fortifies the Common Stock with actual values behind it in addition to the valuable good will of the eminently successful concerns purchased.

LIFE IN THE SEA.

It Exceeds That of the Land, Square Mile For Square Mile.

The sea teems with plants and ani mals, and it has been estimated that the amount of life in the sea exceeds that of the land, square mile for square mile. Animal life is found nearly everywhere, even at the greatest depth; but it flourishes best at or near the shore. On the other hand, plant life seems to be absent over the bottoms of the ocean basins, but plentiful at the surface, where the sunlight plays an important part in its growth.

It is believed that the original forms of life began in the ocean many million years ago, and at no time since has life there ceased. Many of the earliest forms are now extinct; others have gradually increased in number and variety from their beginning to the presoldest sedimentary rocks.

According to geologists, the oceanic waters have made many incursions upon the continents and at times have even in a geologic sense, before the birth of the Appalachian or Rocky other organic remains, which later became solidified into rock. Were not the organic remains still found in the deposits it would be difficult to believe that the ancestors of many present day sea animals once lived along the beaches of an ancient inland sea .-Geological Survey Builetin.

So, In Typical Far Eastern Style, They Made the Best of It.

We were standing round a small fire wrote Arminius Vambery, the Hungarian linguist and traveler, in his account of a caravan journey to Bokhara-when we were startled by two reports from firearms and the loud yelling of some person who was badly hurt. The whole caravan was alarmed, and we all ran to the rear, where we found one of our companions with a shattered arm.

The cause of the affray was this Several horsemen who were conveying the annual taxes from Shiraz to Teheran had come up with two Jewish shopkeepers, whom they first insulted and then started to assault, when a Persian of our company interfered. One of the horsemen became so enraged that he lifted his rifle and shot at the Jews. He afterward declared that ne had intended to frighten one of the Jews by shooting through his cap, but he missed his aim and hit the Per-

The Union Depot

Early Monday morning work on the new union depot was resumed, all contentions of the parties to the injunction proceedings which have halted the work for several weeks past having been adjusted in a manner mutually satisfactory.

Our citizens are pleased that this much needed improvement is now assured and that the chance of loss is reduced to absolutely nothing. They are pleased too that the residents of the city who felt themselves agrieved over council's action have reached an amicable adjustment of those grievances.

A settlement of the controversy between the parties interested, not only puts at an immediate end the delay producing contention, which for a time seriously menaced the whole project, but it restores the good feeling of those who objected to the manner of the proceeding in a way that would have been impossible by court decree at the conclusion of a long drawn out and bitterly contested law suit.

Everybody in Washington wanted the depot project to go nesday fair. forward and now that all objections to the method of proceedure has been disposed of satisfactorily there exists a real cause for congratulation.

The new depot will fill a long needed want and will go a long way toward placing the city in a proper light with the traveling public. It will be a great factor in keeping Washington on the map, where the city belongs.

The President and Mr. Bryan

The emphatic announcement by Mr. Bryan last week of his opposition to the program for national preparedness which President Wilson and his advisors have agreed upon for presentation to the next Congress, did not come as a surprise to those who have followed the trend of events

The radical stand which the former secretary of state adheres to, regarding expenditures of the public revenues for an increase of the army and navy, have long been known. Mr. Bryan's peace policies are so pronounced as to admit of no compromise. President Wilson is also an ardent advocate of peace but, officially at least, whether from sense of official duty or personal inclination, he has declined to go to the ex treme which Mr. Bryan has assumed and is now maintaining.

The second note to Germany following the Lusitania disaster furnished the excuse for Mr. Bryan's retirement from the cabinet. There were few, however, who believed that the sending of that note was the real cause underlying the separation of the president and the secretary of state. Most people believed that the cause of the difference was more fundamental and far reaching in its effect

Since the announcement by President Wilson of the national preparedness program and the intent to submit that program to congress as an administration measure calling for the expenditure of nearly a billion dollars, Mr. Bryan's open declaration of opposition has been hourly expected. On Friday of last week that declaration came and a division in the president's own party seems certain to follow the presentation of the proposal to congress.

As predicted long ago the coming session of congress will early disclose the power of the two men now opposing each other.

Mr. Bryan has heretofore been clothed with the authority of leadership. This time he, as a private citizen, will meet as an opponent in the halls of congress, one of his own political party, the president of the United States, with an immense patronage at his command.

Mr. Bryan has once again "contraried" the leaders of his own party and in doing so has invited a contest with the most formidable opponent he has ever encountered since he attained national prominence and in doing so has made the reelection of President Wilson extremely doubtful.

Political revolt in the Democratic party similar to the Roosevelt uprising in nineteen twelve in the Republican party is not impossible as a result of the present determination of President Wilson and the equally determined opposition of the former secretary of state.

The present difference between the president and Mr. Bryan are not new. They are the same differences which have all along existed and the opposition of the former secretary of state to the president's plan of national preparedness serves only to emphasize those differences. It is the clash between the man who is guided by precedent and the man who would break away from precedent and carve a new way for humanity through the wilderness of problems. It is a difference of belief and therefore extremely doubtful of adjustment.

MACE OF THE SPEAKER.

Ancient Emblem Used In the House of Representatives.

In one respect the house of repre sentatives surpasses the senate in dig nity. The senate has no mace. Now, a mace is not much in the way of fur niture. It is a silver eagle mounted upon a staff around which are bands of

This mace is always an emblem of the house of representatives. It is the duty of one employee to look after it Just before a session of the house be gins he takes it from the office of the sergeant at arms into the house chamber, and as soon as the speaker's gave falls he inserts it in a socket in a stone pillar at the right of the speaker's chair. The mace remains there while the house is in session and is taken out and stood beside its pedestal when the house is in committee of the whole When the house adjourns the mace is carried back to the office of the ser geant at arms,

This ancient emblem has not a thing to do with the order of business of the house save as one of the old time regu lations that are continued. What a Toad Enjoys.

There are few things more amusing than to watch a toad submitting to the operations of a back scratching. He will at first look somewhat suspicious ly at the twig which you are advance ing toward him, but after two or three passes down his back his manner un dergoes a marked change, his eyes close with an expression of infinite rapture, he plants his feet wider apart and his body swells out to nearly double its ordinary size, as if to obtain by these means more room for enjoyment. Branch Line of the Belgrade-Salonica Railroad Broken When the Germans Capture Krusevac, an Important Serbian Town-Russians Harassing German Lines on Eastern Front.

London, Nov. 9. - The road from Eerlin to Constantinople is open to the Teutons. Berlin announced that the Serbian sector of the Orient railroad has been cleared of the defenders. The important city of Kruzevac, five miles west of the Orient railroad and about thirty-five miles from Nish, has fallen into the hands of the German invaders.

Kruzevac's fall means that the branch railway line to Ushitze, near the Bosnian frontier, has been broken by the invaders close to the point where it leaves the main Belgrade-Nish-Saloniki line. A large number of prisoners, ten guns and a lot of war material fell into German hands.

Burton suggested the names of Governor Willis and Senator Harding for delegates-at-large.

"I shall join the other Republicans of Ohio in supporting Senator Burton for the presidential nomination," Governor Willis said, "and if chosen, as he suggests, as a delegate-at-large to the national convention, will do all I can to see that he and Ohio are honored by his nomination."

Mr. Burton came out in a formal indorsement of Governor Willis' administration, expressed confidence in Republican success next year, not only in Ohio, but also in the nation, and for years to come.

Senator Harding was in conference with Mr. Burton. The senator declared that Governor Willis' "personal sacrifice" in withdrawing from the presidential race had won for him new followers and that the party will be back of the governor solidly and Mrs. Austin's Bag Pancake, deli- sincerely for renomination and elec-

Loot Market House and Raid German Consulate.

OUTBREAK IN CHIHUAHUA

Rioting Quelled When the Commander Forced Loan on Wealthy Citizens to Pay the Troops-Manzanillo Said to Have Been Looted by Carranza Soldiers.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 9.—According to Americans who have just arrived here from Chihuahua, a mob composed women, raided the German consulate in Chihuahua, burned the market house and looted the headquarters of the confiscation agency.

Following the rioting, the Villa mismanagement. commander in Chihuahua levied a forced loan of $100,000 Mexican gold on the merchants and wealthy residents in order to obtain money with which to pay the rioting troops.

The rioting started when the soldiers made demand for their pay on the officers of the Chihuahua garrison. Having no money, the commander attempted to put them off by promising money later. The soldiers, joined by a mob of men and women, then went to the market house, set fire to it after taking out quantities of food, and proceeded to the German consulate, where silver and lead bullion belonging to the Chihuahua Mining company is said to have been seized. The confiscation agency was then visited, but nothing of value was found there. The forced loan raised sufficient money to pay off the troops and the mob dispersed.

Light of a Deep Sea Shrimp.

One of the most extraordinary crustacea ever discovered was dredged up by the Prince of Monaco from a depth of 16,000 feet. It has been named Oplophorus grimaldi. It is a sort of shrimp, and its peculiarity is that it squirts from two holes near its mouth a liquid which, on coming into contact with salt water, produces a fine pale blue light.

Absolute darkness reigns in the depths where it lives, but the little shrimp does not find it necessary to keep its light always burning. This would use up too much energy, so it squirts out the illuminating fluid only when it wants to look at something, or perhaps to attract the minute animalculae that form its food.-New York

The Comous KANGAROO.

A Theory Its Queer Style of Animal Architecture Suggests.

The kangaroo family is unique and is found only in Australia. LIFE IN THE SEA.

It Exceeds That of the Land, Square Mile For Square Mile.

The sea teems with plants and ani mals, and it has been estimated that the amount of life in the sea exceeds that of the land, square mile for square mile. Animal life is found nearly ev erywhere, even at the greatest depth. but it flourishes best at or near the shore. On the other hand, plant life seems to be absent over the bottoms of the ocean basins, but plentiful at the surface, where the sunlight plays an important part in its growth.

It is believed that the original forms of life began in the ocean many million years ago, and at no time since has forms are now extinct; others have gradually increased in number and variety from their beginning to the present time. How long ago life began no one has definitely determined, but it is known to have been many million years ago, for the remains of extinct animals and plants are found in the oldest sedimentary rocks.

According to geologists, the oceanic waters have made many incursions upon the continents and at times have nearly submerged them. Long ago, even in a geologic sense, before the birth of the Appalachian or Rocky mountains, the sea made frequent visits to the interior of our continent and or slimy deposit mixed with shells and other organic remains, which later became solidified into rock. Were not the organic remains still found in the de posits it would be difficult to believe that the ancestors of many present day sea animals once lived along the beaches of an ancient inland sea .-Geological Survey Bulletin.

We were standing round a small fire wrote Arminius Vambery, the Hungarian linguist and traveler, in his account of a caravan journey to Bok hara-when we were startled by two reports from firearms and the loud yelling of some person who was badly hurt. The whole caravan was alarmed, and we all ran to the rear, where we found one of our companions with a shattered arm

The cause of the affray was this: Several horsemen who were conveying the annual taxes from Shiraz to Teheran had come up with two Jewish shopkeepers, whom they first insulted and then started to assault, when s Persian of our company interfered One of the horsemen became so enraged that he lifted his rifle and shot at the Jews. He afterward declared that he had intended to frighten one of the Jews by shooting through his cap, but he missed his aim and hit the Per-

hours and at the end of that time, in a state of absentmindedness, left the team at another livery stable, where it remained eight days. At stable No. I there was no worry about the team. They knew the attorney was perfectly good for the pay. At stable No. 2 there was equal freedom from anxiety. The attorney came there, left the team and went away, saying nothing. They put the horse into a stall and "chalked it down" on the office slate, knowing him to be a business man who paid cash. Discovery came at last, and the lawyer was presented with two bills, one for eight days' bire and the other for eight days' keep. He paid both left, after each retreat, a sandy, muddy | bills promptly, but it cured him of being absentminded for nearly a whole human beings to the disease known as tetanus, or lockjaw, a poison called tetanine is obtained which is over 100 times more powerful than strychnine. A fragment of tetanine so small as to be invisible to the naked eye would kill almost instantaneously the strongest man. One fifteen-thousandth part of a grain of it has caused the death of a horse 1,600,000,000 times its own weight.-Pearson's.
